

CENSUS COUNT IN BRISTOL SHOWS AN INCREASE OF 1523

Every One of Five Original
Wards Shows Less
Population

6TH WARD AIDS JUMP

Annexation Put the Borough
Among Those Showing
Gain in Residents

The unchecked official figures of the population of Bristol have been announced as 11,800 by the supervisor of census for this district, Monro Anders. Bristol is a part of the 22nd district of Pennsylvania.

These figures show an increase of 1,523 in the last 10 years or since the last official count which was made in 1920. At the 1920 count the population of Bristol was given as 10,273. In 1910 the population was 8,750.

Not a single ward of the five which comprised Bristol Borough at the 1920 census shows an increase in population. Every one of the first five districts shows losses which total 902.

The Sixth Ward which was annexed in 1922 shows a population today of 2,425 which makes up the gain for the entire borough.

The loss in the five original wards of Bristol is due to the fact that in 1920 Bristol's population was still inflated from the war time activities in this section. With the beginning of 1921 many of the transient residents who had been enumerated here in the year previous began to leave, having completed their work here for the government.

The Sixth Ward was not a part of Bristol Borough in the 1920 count.

According to the figures just made public losses are shown in the first, second, third, fourth and fifth wards. In the 1910 enumeration the districts were not given separately.

No farms are enumerated.

BRISTOL CENSUS TABLE
1910: Total population, 9,256. Separate count for sub-divisions not given.

	1920	1930	Loss
First Ward	2039	1959	80
Second Ward	1596	1527	69
Third Ward	1342	1183	159
Fourth Ward	2362	2130	232
Fifth Ward	2934	2572	362
Sixth Ward		2425
Totals	10273	11796	902

The figures for Bristol Township show a decrease of 645 in the population of the district. This is probably due to the annexation of what was the village of Harrison as a part of Bristol Borough. The total population is given as 4382 as compared with 5027 in 1920.

Langhorne Manor Borough's population is given as 396 as compared with 207 for 1920. This shows an increase of 189 in the past 10 years. There is one farm enumerated.

Falls Township shows a count of 2,094 as compared with 1789 in 1920, or an increase of 215.

Middletown Township's population is given as 2096 or an increase of 731 over 1920 when the count was 1365.

FRIEND OF BOYS

EDWARD LYNN
Manager, Grand Theatre

BOYS ARE TO "RUN" GRAND THEATRE, SAT.

Group of 15 to Be Selected From Boy Scouts of Community

EDWARD LYNN'S IDEA

It has remained for Edward Lynn, manager of the Grand Theatre, to originate a new idea for Boys' Week and today he announces that a selected group of boys will "run" the theatre Saturday evening from seven to eight o'clock.

Boys will fill every position in the popular playhouse from the office of manager down. There will be boy manager, boy ticket taker, stage hands, cashier, orchestra and wherever a man or a woman now serves a boy will be found occupying the position.

It will require 15 boys to "run" the playhouse. These boys will be selected from the various troops of Boy Scouts in the community. The troop members will elect the boys and then the group will select the positions which each is to occupy.

The boys selected will meet with Manager Edward Lynn Friday evening and at that time will be instructed in their various duties. Mr. Lynn has as usual given gratis the use of the theatre for Saturday morning exercises for the boys. He has selected a fine western picture for entertainment.

The Saturday afternoon matinee at the theatre will be held at three o'clock instead of 2:30. The Eddington Industrial School Band is coming to Bristol to take part in the Boys' Week parade and after the parade they will be given refreshments and then will proceed to the theatre. A short concert will be given in front of the theatre and then the boys of the band will be the guests of Mr. Lynn at the matinee, after which they will return to Eddington.

TWO CONVICTS KILLED AT OHIO PENITENTIARY WHEN NATIONAL GUARDSMEN ACCIDENTALLY FIRE A MACHINE GUN INTO SOME SLEEPING PRISONERS

Both of Victims Are Said to Have Been Burned in Easter
Monday Fire Disaster — Released From Hospital Only Few Days Ago

COLUMBUS, O., May 8.—(INS)—Two convicts were shot and killed at Ohio State Penitentiary this morning when National Guardsmen accidentally fired a machine gun into sleeping prisoners, according to Deputy Warden J. C. Woodard.

Colonel Robert Haubrich of the State Militia, who have been in control of the State Prison since the Easter Monday night holocaust, which exacted a death toll of 320 lives, was inside the prison when the shooting occurred.

Haubrich is the official spokesman, and neither Woodard nor other officials would announce any details.

The Colonel had been "inside" since midnight, when 400 convicts, who had been quartered in a barbed-wire stockade, burned all except one of their 88 tents.

It was reported that a National Guardsman was "fooling" with the machine gun when it was accidentally discharged, resulting in the deaths of two prisoners, who were asleep.

Albert Freeman, a prisoner who was serving from 10 to 20 years on a manslaughter charge, is said to have been one of the two victims of the accidental machine-gun fire.

The other dead convict is said to be Frank Ross.

According to Dr. George W. Keil, prison physician, both dead prisoners were burned in the fire disaster April 21, and had been released from the Penitentiary Hospital only two days ago.

Freeman, a negro, had been mentally deranged for some time, and penitentiary officials had planned to send him soon to the State Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Lima.

The machine gun which blazed its bullets of death on peacefully-sleeping convicts, had been trained on the prisoners who were quartered in the prison chapel. Guardsmen were changing a belt of bullets on the gun when one of the militiamen accidentally pressed the trigger.

"This morning's occurrence is to be regretted very much," Colonel Robert Haubrich declared. "However, it is fortunate that such a tragedy has not occurred before."

Three National Guardsmen were in charge of the machine gun which accidentally belched forth its death-dealing bullets this morning—members of company D, of Marion, Ohio.

TRACK MEET HONORS CAPTURED BY BRISTOL

Loss of Five Stars Fails To Retard Local H. S.
Athletes

WIN BY ELEVEN POINTS

Bristol High School again showed its prowess in a track meet when with the loss of five of its track stars, it defeated Morrisville High School, 44 to 33, on the local track yesterday afternoon.

Morrisville came here very strong and gave Bristol plenty of opposition. It was not until the last three events that the Cardinal and Gray was able to forge ahead.

At the beginning of the high jump, Morrisville topped the Bristol points by three. Barrett, Capriotti and Collins cleared the bar at five feet, two inches. The Morrisville jumpers, Hughes and Stockham, failed in their three attempts to clear the bar, and Bristol took the lead.

The mile relay then took place. Bristol finished a great distance ahead of the visitors in this event and then led by nine points.

If Morrisville had placed one, two, three in the closing event, the pole vaulting contest, it would have tied Bristol. But Green, of Bristol, won the match and clinched the meet for the local school.

The thrilling sprint of the day took place in the 220-yard dash, when "Bud" Tulio, of Bristol, running his first sprint race, finished a few steps ahead of Lewis, the Morrisville runner. Tulio was clocked at twenty-five seconds flat.

Lewis, with eight points, led the meet in scoring. Lafferty was second with six points.

Results of the meet:

Patrolman W. F. Koons, of South Langhorne, has been sent to Kennett Square, and Patrolman F. L. Seldomridge, of Kennett Square, is now in South Langhorne.

EDGELY WINS CROWN AS DIAMOND "CHAMPS"

Captures Boys' Week Honors in Baseball by Winning
Final Game

FINAL SCORE 22 TO 8

Edgely won the Boys' Week baseball championship yesterday on Sullivan's field by defeating the Second Ward 22 to 8.

The game was lopsided from the start when the Edgely boys scored four runs and then added six more in the second. In all, the winners collected seventeen hits off Comfort, Alta and Narcisi.

The Second Warders were in a very erroring mood, no fewer than ten errors being committed, and every one was an aid to the new champions' scoring.

Fire was the winning hurler, although he was very wild. He issued nine passes but overshadowed this by fanning twelve batters.

All the losers' runs were made in the fifth frame. In this inning they made but four hits but managed to sneak in eight runs.

Rockhill, Gould, Hibbs and Felkner were the batting stars with three hits each. Rockhill also excelled in the field.

Dorsey and Herman were the losers' best with the stick.

Edgely, the newly crowned champions, eliminated the 1929 champions—the Sixth Ward—in the first game, and then proved their playing standard by winning over the Fourth Ward.

Second Ward, the 1929 runners-up, beat the First Ward and later trimmed the Third Ward.

Results Being Shown In Efforts for Better Films

Through efforts of those interested in a movement for the setting of good standards for motion pictures, much has happened in the past few months that points to better silent, synchronized and talking motion pictures.

The signing of the new code covering future productions is in the words of Alice Ames Winter, associate director of public relations, connected with the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., "a democratic rather than an autocratic formula."

Meetings are being held, and conferences conducted between producers and actors, with the idea of enforcement in all studios alike.

Among the many recent films that are proving of interest, and that are mentioned as fine and wholesome, are: "Tiger Hunting in India," "Song of My Heart," "Across the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," "The Case of Sergeant Grisch," "Journey's End," "Sarah and Son," "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Around the World with the Graf Zeppelin," "Sky Hawk."

HOBBY FAIR ENTRIES TO BE JUDGED TONIGHT

Exhibits Being Arranged in Community House Ready
For Listing

INVITE ALL TO ATTEND

The hobby fair, for days the chief item of conversation among the boys of the town and many grown-ups as well, is to open today at the community house.

The fair, which has been conducted annually in connection with Boys' Week events, attracts the attention of many of the lads of the section, who have oddities they wish to exhibit.

Judging in the show will take place tonight, with the following acting as judges:

All who have items to enter are asked to have them at the place of exhibit early this afternoon.

As early as yesterday morning there were found on the tables at the place of showing, several entries, placed there by boys who wanted to be in time.

Two of the oddities are masks, painted in grotesque manner, and fashioned from newspapers soaked in water, and then molded into masks with the aid of cloth, and finished with coloring.

Fungi, including numerous and blackened pieces, is to be found, together with one or two sets of tree bark. The lads placing the latter have plainly marked each piece. Among other things picked up about the wood and fields in this vicinity are various kinds of stones and minerals.

A gas mask, used during the World War, a "tin" helmet, and a much worn knap-sack, were taken to the community house by another youngster; while still another has placed on exhibit a gun-case, containing five guns of different shapes and kinds.

Included in the handicraft are: Airplanes of various designs; camp craft exhibit, with small bridge, fire tower, lean-to, etc., fashioned of tiny twigs.

A wood-turning lathe, the pride of some boy with an active turn of mind, is shown, and then looking with keen eye at those who view the articles is a large black crow, well-stuffed.

Snakes are not left out of the list this year, as already there are two well preserved in alcohol.

From the early appearance of the community house room, where already a number of pet projects have been gathered, the hobby fair this year will be one of interest and success, both from the viewpoint of the public and that of the judges who will without doubt find praise for the items that show untiring effort on the part of the enterprising lads.

LATEST NEWS

PHILADELPHIA, May 8.—(INS)—Deserted by his wife a few weeks ago, Hugh Mullins, 42, asphyxiated himself in the kitchen of his home here today. The body was discovered by two gas company employees who were called by neighbors because of the escaping gas fumes.

MANCHESTER, Md., May 8.—(INS)—This village today had had a narrow escape from destruction from fire when a blaze spread from a pile of rubbish to a factory, destroying it and a dozen garages and small buildings nearby before it was brought under control. Firemen from 15 surrounding communities came to the aid of the local volunteer company to save the village. Damage was estimated today at $30,000, most of which was from the loss of the sewing factory operated by Louis Levy, of Baltimore.

BOYS' WEEK SONG

By DORON GREEN

(Tune: "There's A Long, Long Trail")

—I—
Time is passing very slowly,
Hearts are bright and gay;
I'm a-growing weary, only
Waiting for the day.
Old remembrances are thronging
Through my memory;
For the week of weeks is coming soon,
That will bring back joys to me.

—II—
Boys are happy, very happy;
Time at last has come;
Feet are marching, gayly marching
To the life and drum.
Old-time memories returning
Gracefully we yield;
For it seems our minds are full of dreams
Of that old high school field.

—CHORUS—
There's a great, great time a-coming
Unto the boys of our town,
When with flags and banners flying
They go marching 'round.
There's a great, great fun in bringing
Into the life of a boy,
All the pleasure that is crowded
In that long, long week of joy.

(Written on request and to be sung at Grand Theatre by boys on Saturday morning)

$65.00 Taken From Safe of Weed Chevrolet Co.

Gaining an entrance to the office of Weed Chevrolet Company, Farragut avenue, early yesterday morning, a thief or thieves made away with about $65 in cash, which was taken from the safe.

The safe had been broken open, evidently with a hammer and chisel. Apparently nothing else about the place was taken.

Yesterday morning when employees arrived at the place the safe was found open and the box containing money gone. Further investigation led to the discovery of the small box in one of the automobiles in the garage. Some papers, discarded by the thief, were strewn about the car, and the dome light of the machine had been left on.

This is the second time in the past six months that money has been stolen from the Weed place of business. At the previous time between $250 and $300 in cash was taken.

DRIVER'S RESPONSIBILITY

Motorists are not given to speculating upon the degree of their legal liability as they drive along. They are not careful because they think the courts are prejudiced in favor of the pedestrian, nor are they reckless because they think the courts are on their side. They are careful when they think of the chances for an accident and careless when they forget to think.

But the obligation is upon the motorist to consider that the unforeseen may happen. Knowing pedestrians to be absent-minded and arrogant and children to be impetuous and reckless, the driver of the motor vehicle must maintain a margin of caution to allow for their contributory negligence. Merely because contributory negligence relieves him of legal liability does not relieve him of a moral obligation.

The following sections of a bulletin issued by California highway authorities emphasize recent decisions by the courts of that state on the subject under discussion.

"The pedestrian has the right to use all parts of the highway being chargeable only for the exercise of a due amount of care.

"The pedestrian hit and injured in the center of the street cannot be considered as negligent because he was there instead of on the sidewalk.

"The pedestrian is not guilty of negligence because he fails to look behind him. The pedestrian is not bound, as a matter of law, to be looking and listening continuously to see if motor vehicles are approaching.

In other words, the courts are of the opinion that one act of carelessness does not deserve another. It is not the privilege of truck drivers and autoists to observe a perpetual open season for running down those who walk without looking and thinking.

INCENDIARY FOREST FIRES

Unemployment is blamed in a number of states for numerous and destructive forest fires. Official explanations agree that men, made desperate by weeks and months of idleness, are starting the fires to provide employment for themselves and others like them. It is a game with many precedents in those states that impress fire fighters at an attractive hourly wage.

But what a near-sighted, destructive and depraved method for enforcing employment it is. For a few dollars these desperadoes will destroy timber worth millions of dollars, deprive their fellow men of their summer playgrounds, slaughter the game that is sport and joy of thousands and place in jeopardy human lives and homes and gardens.

Human minds must slip a cog when they conspire to spread such havoc and unhappiness rather than appeal to that charity which organized society never refuses.

State governments maintaining state-owned forests and charged with the protection of private timber would be justified, in the face of these incendiary fires, to enforce conscription of forest fire fighters without compensation. That is an unpleasant threat the vandals are bringing upon themselves.

"Oh! it's not as bad as that," said David.

lived. Very old he looked as he lay there; his face was pinched and transversely wrinkled; the accustomed bronze of health was replaced by a purplish tinge; the grey of his hair seemed almost white.

"It was just after we had tea," said Moira. "He was all right till then. He had been diving all through the afternoon tide, and there was nothing the matter with him. Nothing! As we got up from tea, he staggered, said something about his heart, and collapsed. With the help of the boys I got him below and into bed." She looked a little wildly from Stella to Wade. "What is it, do you think? Do you know anything about delirium? I have been trying to look it up in the medicine-book. See, here is the book! Perhaps you can find it. I looked and looked; but there are so many diseases! She choked back a sob, and addressed herself to Stella in particular:

"He sent for you at once. He has been dreadfully afraid you would not come quickly. Everything depended on your coming, he said. Why? Why? Is it that you know the cure?" She gripped the white girl's arms and looked strainingly into her face. Then, at a sound from the bunk, she released them and knelt beside her father.

Melrose's eyes had opened uncertainly, wearily, and his lips were moving.

"Has—she—come?" The sound was uncertain as the opening of his eyes.

"Yes—yes!" said Moira eagerly. "See, dear, she is waiting. How do you feel now, Dad? Is the pain in your heart gone? What can I get for you? Dad! Dad! Do you feel better?"

"Some—brandy." At once she got it and gave it to him, with one hand holding the glass to his lips and with the other raising his head a little.

"That—is—better," He looked at Stella, and the look was a beckon. She went to him, and knelt as Moira had knelt. As though from a great relief, he sighed, and his hand went out slowly, seeking hers. Stella grasped it. For a moment there was a silence, profound and acute. Moira and David stood looking down at them. The half-caste was trembling a little.

ISLE OF ESCAPE

Copyright 1930, Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
Based on the Warner Bros. motion picture and the novel by Jack McLaren of the same title.

SYNOPSIS
David Wade, robbed while drunk by O'Shane, is cured for by Stella Blackney, secretly the wife of O'Shane, whom she loathes and fears. She appeals to Wade to take her away, following her mother's death, for by their bargain O'Shane was then to claim his marital rights. Plying her plight, Wade flees with her to the South Sea island of Molokai where they find Moira, a half-caste girl, who is attracted by Wade. Stella, now loving Wade, is afraid the half-caste will win him away since she herself is not free to marry him. They quarrel about remaining on the island, but make up. Moira's father is taken ill and sends for them.

CHAPTER IX—Continued
"Ah! You are here at last!" she breathed as Stella came in range of the yellow light and went down; and the words seemed to vibrate as a violin-string vibrates, so tense were they.

"We came at once," murmured David. "Is he any better?"

The half-caste pointed to a bunk-bed built against the side.

"He is just the same," said Moira in her breathless, tense tone.

Stella stepped to the bunk-bed, David with her. Melrose lay outstretched on his back, his eyes closed and his breathing so slight that at first it seemed he no longer

"I want—to make it clear—she won't be a pauper."

"I can't stand it," came Moira's whispered voice, addressing David.

"I can't! Is there nothing you can do? Are we to stand here and see—and see him—"

"Oh, it's not as bad as that!" said David encouragingly, though without conviction of tone.

"He brave!" he whispered and took her arm comfortingly in his.

If Melrose heard, he made no sign.

"I don't want her—to be—with-out a friend—alone. She's—had—too—much of that kind—of life. It—ain't right. I—can't bear to—think of it!" —just cant—

Again there was that pause for the gaining of strength. The shore insect once more buzzed harshly into the lamp-glass, then flew up the stairway and out. From outside came no sound. It was as though the crew-boys, the sea, the world itself, were listening.

"So—I—thought—maybe—you'd—be—willing—to—look—after—her."

"Oh!" Stella exclaimed, and the sudden feeling of cold came to her.

"You could go—into partnership! Melrose hurried on as well as he could, and the anxiousness of his expression more intense than ever.

"You—and your—husband—with the—trading. It'd be—profitable. Very—profitable."

His voice became to Stella scarcely more than a sound. A chaos of emotion had besieged her consciousness. Moira in her care! Moira thrust thus right into the society of David! It could not be! It was too terrible! It was some horrible jest! The old man did not know what he was saying! He had asked her to take Moira into her care!

She shrank back a little from the bunk. Melrose was no longer a kindly old man, anxious for his daughter's welfare. He was a monster, intent on making sure Stella's happiness would be destroyed.

"You're not going to pass out so easily as all that, Melrose!" David was saying. "You are going to look after your daughter yourself!" And Moira was kneeling beside Stella and looking at her father and speaking to him endearingly in a tone which had in it more than a hint of hysteria.

Melrose's eyes were still full upon Stella.

"What—do—you—think—m-m?" And his grip of Stella's hand tightened with surprising force, and his lips quivered as the lips of a child quiver to fear of a disappointment.

"I—I—" Stella began. She didn't know what to say. Ideas and words to express ideas were gone from her. She looked away from the old man, looked round the room, at its queer ornaments, at the charts in their copper cases, and none of them did she see distinctly.

A haze was before her eyes, and her heart was thumping, bumping. A fear came to her that she was about to faint. With her free hand she rubbed her brow and her eyes. She looked again at Melrose.

And then suddenly she felt better. The whirl of chaotic emotion stilled, and was gone. In its place came calm, warm and deep and surging— pity for Melrose. He was not a monster! He was merely an old man, a dying old man, who loved his daughter as he loved no other thing, whose last thoughts were for that daughter's happiness and security; who feared to die, not because he feared death, but because of what his dying might mean for her.

She took his other hand.

"What—do—you—think—m-m?" he said again, and his eyes were not so anxious now.

"I SUFFERED 12 YEARS; KONJOLA MADE ME WELL"

Happy Theatre Employee Tells How Stomach Trouble Was Ended by Modern Medicine

MR. WILLIAM COLLINS

"I owe Konjola a debt that I will never be able to pay," said Mr. William Collins, 5485 Hillcrest avenue, Pittsburgh. "For twelve long years I suffered from stomach trouble, day in and day out. I endured pains that I thought were beyond endurance—dizziness so severe came over me that I was unable to stand without support. I lost weight and strength, and I began to think my case was hopeless. At the suggestion of friends I bought a treatment of Konjola little thinking it alone had the power to help me regain my health. But that is just what it did—and more. After finishing the treatment, I feel better in every way. My stomach and digestive organs are in perfect condition, and I eat three full meals a day. I never suffer from headaches or dizziness, and I have gained weight. I feel better than I have thought I could again. Konjola made me well."

Konjola is a medicine that, when given a fair trial—from six to eight bottles, easily and harmlessly eliminates the common ills of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and rheumatism, neuritis and nervousness. Konjola is sold in Bristol, Pa., at Hoffman's Cut Rate store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.—(Adv.)

INTELLIGENT BALL PLAYERS ARE MOST LIKELY ONES TO PULL "BONES"

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor
NEW YORK, May 8.—There apparently comes a time in the lives of men, even the most subtle of them, when the mind turns traitor and refuses to have anything further to do with the rest of the body. When that time comes, their legs start doing things at random—with the inevitable result.

Burleigh Grimes, is known all over the baseball wheel as an intelligent ball player who is perfectly capable of doing his own pitching and hitting—and thinking. An analytical type, his opinions on ball field matters are respected, and, indeed, valued. Yet on the occasion of his first appearance in a Boston box score, he committed the unpardonable sin. He very abruptly stole third with the bases filled.

As a matter of fact, it might seem that only the wise are capable of outstanding absurdities in the plain view of all that baseball affords. The dullard is a conscious painstaking thinker. He quickly settles into the groove of baseball tactics and is careful never to transgress routine. Maybe he dimly realizes that he is not quite bright and so is constantly vigilant against mental error.

How else can one account for the fact that highly intelligent men like Fred Merkle, Dave Bancroft, Lazzeri, Koenig, and others have been guilty of the immortal bone?

I have no acquaintance, personal or otherwise, with the equipment of John Anderson, the original anatomist of the diamond. All one knows is that he is famed in rhyme and sonnet as the pioneer of a play that calls for a clean steal of second with all of the bases occupied. Nor does one hear of Urban "Red" Faber, the venerable gentleman of Chicago, as being notable for a lack of intelligence. Yet in the midst of the 1917 world series, of which he was the pitching hero, he stole third quite without warning. In fact, he even neglected to take the base runners on first and third into his confidence.

By this time, the point about the high degree of Merkle's intelligence has been sufficiently emphasized. So has the fact that his negligence was important only because it was the means of deciding the 1908 pennant race. Likewise the fact that he only did what many another had done in similar circumstances—without, however, being apprehended. Merkle simply was the victim of fate.

Bancroft's lapse and that of Lazzeri and Koenig were far more reprehensible, yet I doubt if many now recall the former and I have talked with baseball men who never even heard of the latter, although it happened only a few weeks ago. It happened, as a matter of fact, on the opening day in Philadelphia. Haas was on first base and was forced at second, Koenig to Lazzeri. The latter deemed the side to have been retired, and, rolling the ball into the middle of the infield, started for the bench.

Koenig was a little brighter, but not enough so. He retrieved the ball, and to the amazement of all, he started chasing Haas, the man who had been retired only a moment before, toward third. Meantime Simmons, advanced un molested, from first base. He scored, within the minute on a clean single to the outfield.

As for David J. Bancroft, admittedly one of the split-second thinkers of the profession, he was at the time of his shame McGraw's field captain and, as such, was required to be so smart that he even was expected to know what McGraw was thinking. The Giants were playing the Cubs this time and Bancroft was on third base, with first and second also occupied. But the man on first got too frisky and was picked off, leaving that base "open."

A moment later the batter walked, and to the astonishment of everybody Bancroft calmly started walking toward the plate. Bob O'Farrell, then catching for the Cubs, saw him coming, and just as calmly he waited, ball in hand. When Mr. Bancroft got close enough to tag, Mr. O'Farrell tagged him and the incident was closed.

In a debutante it's Charm

in a cigarette it's Taste

MANY FINE QUALITIES make up the "charm" that is Miss America's, but her genuine wholesomeness appeals most of all.

IN A CIGARETTE, TOO, the real appeal is wholesomeness of taste.

WITNESS CHESTERFIELD'S popularity, growing every day. No flash in the pan, but enduring popularity, earned by giving smokers a cigarette of better quality, richer aroma and finer fragrance, blended and cross-blended to just one end... "TASTE above everything".

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield cigarettes are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price. LIGGETT & MYERS TOBACCO CO.
